

MARKET UPDATE:

Prunes Year-to-date shipments have been like the 2022 season, with a slightly faster beginning at the beginning of the season.

In proportion to the main volume, Chile is increasing the volume of unpitted prunes vs pitted prunes exports by 2%.

The primary market for pitted prunes in 2023 has been China and Germany, with an increase of 45% and 46% each from the 2022 season.

On the other hand, we can appreciate a decrease of Chilean exports of 41% to the United Kingdom and 36% to the United States compared to the 2022 season.

We can also appreciate a downward trend in the Poland market imports (from Chile) over the past three years. On the other hand, we see an upward trend in exports to the Australian market since 2021.

Regarding unpitted prunes during season 2023, Chilean exports to China have increased in a 64% from 2022 season and a 1577% from 2021. This means Chile exported over 5.000 tons more in 2023 than in year 2022.

The largest decrease in unpitted prunes exports has been to United States and Brazil, with a diminution of 71% and 40% each.

Regarding the 2024 crop, the industry estimates 72.000 metric tons of available volume for this coming season. The mentioned number is an expected availability for the potential production of Chile. This year the harvest delayed 2 weeks in comparison to previous years. The drying process should be ending on late March with first shipments in April.
